

2020: The Year in Review

It was a tough year. We didn't get to do some of our favorite things, like Concerts on the Green. But PBTC still had a significant positive impact on our community. Here's how...

- During the height of the initial shutdown, we donated $5,000 to StayHomeSD, which delivered food and necessities to seniors in our neighborhood. We partially funded this with a quarantine-themed art contest, using the winning entries for t-shirt sales. →
- PBTC and two of its board members collectively donated $2,500 to fund wi-fi installation at the PB Recreation Center.
- We paid $3,000 for an extra day of trash pickup this summer in the business district, which was being overrun with trash due to increased restaurant to-go orders resulting from the pandemic.
- With the help of your contributions, we've been power-washing sidewalks on Garnet and benches and trash can areas on the boardwalk at the Felspar and Emerald cul-de-sacs. ↓

- We advocated for park curfews, boardwalk vending regulations, expanded park hours for dogs and other quality-of-life issues in Pacific Beach.
- We landscaped the area around the iconic "wave" sign at the entry to PB on Grand Avenue with attractive succulent plantings.

- When the City fell behind on weed abatement, we organized volunteers to clean up weeds and trash on Mission Bay Drive, Garnet Avenue, Grand Avenue, and Soledad Mountain Road. →
- Two local students were awarded scholarships from PBTC as Dan Froelich Youth Award winners.
- We donated $1,000 to Friends of Rose Creek to aid cleanup and habitat restoration.

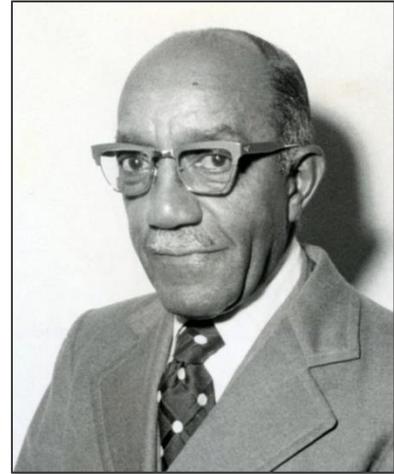

■ We supported a proposal to re-name a community park in honor of PB's first Black educator, William Payne. →

■ We helped two Mission Bay High students to launch a new community art and literature magazine.

■ Our monthly meetings went online so that community members could continue to hear from, and ask questions of, our first responders and representatives of our elected officials.

■ We collaborated with volunteers and other PB organizations to launch a new Block Captain program for businesses on Garnet Avenue, with the objective of collectively leveraging opportunities and solving problems for a clean and vibrant business district.

■ We honored our first responders with the annual PAESAN (Police and Emergency Services Appreciation Night) celebration, held online for the first time in 40 years. ↓

■ We held a PB porch photo contest and the first annual PB Chalk Art Challenge to add some fun to our time in quarantine. ↓
