Congressman Scott Peters: Howard Ou

Report sent

Scott announced bipartisan legislation to help reduce the stigma around mental health injuries and encourage more service members and veterans to pursue mental health treatment. This bill designates the month of June as National Post-Traumatic Stress Injury (PTSI) Awareness month and June 27th as National PTSI Awareness Day. It aims to reduce the stigma that comes with labeling post-traumatic stress as a disorder, and instead identifies it as injury stemming from military service that is treatable in the same way as other service-related wounds.

- Scott’s bill, HYPE Act, the Hydropower Permit Extension passed congress unanimously to cut red tape in the construction permitting process for hydropower projects and encourage greater investment in clean energy. The HYPE Act adds a year to preliminary construction permits for hydropower projects, and allows the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to give projects a four-year extension if delays prevent them from breaking ground.

- Scott introduced the bipartisan SUPER Act, or Super Pollutant Emissions Reduction Act, to combat the emission of short-lived climate pollutants, benefit public health, and repair American climate leadership. Super pollutants include black carbon, hydrofluorocarbons, and methane. They cause 25 – 2,000 times more warming per ton over a 25 to 100 year period than carbon dioxide, making them among the most significant drivers of climate change. The SUPER Act establishes a federal task force to coordinate and optimize existing efforts at various levels of government to reduce super pollutant emissions.
